

List of figures

Volume I

Figure 1.1	Weighted average of collective bargaining coverage, 2000–2013	9
Figure 1.2	Weighted average of wage share, 2000–2017	14
Figure 1.3	Gini coefficient of weighted average of inequality in disposable income, 2000–2017	15
Figure 1.4	Average real wage development and productivity growth, 2001–2017	16
Figure 1.5	Weighted average of unemployment, 2000–2017	18
Figure 1.6	Weighted average of union density, 2000–2015.....	20
Figure 1.7	Weighted average of strike volume, 2000–2017	21
Figure 3.1	Collective agreements at the company and industry levels in Belgium, 1997–2017	61
Figure 3.2	Cross-industry agreements in Belgium, 1997–2017.....	62
Figure 3.3	The floor and ceiling for wage development in Belgium, 1997–2020.....	63
Figure 3.4	Days not worked due to industrial action per semester in Belgium (private sector only), 1997–2018.....	67
Figure 7.1	Percentage share of enterprise agreements including some reference to a pay increase, 2006–2017	143
Figure 7.2	Average pay increases in collective agreements, actual pay increases in nominal and real terms, 2006–2017	144
Figure 7.3	Percentage of collective agreements in the ‘enterprise sphere’ including flexible work accounts and restrictions on agency work, 2007–2017.....	145
Figure 8.1	Compensation rate of unemployed benefits for skilled male workers and unskilled female workers, 1979–2015.....	155
Figure 8.2	Number of working days lost, 1996–2016	164
Figure 9.1	Trade union membership (% of employees, 95% confidence intervals of estimates), 2000–2016	176
Figure 9.2	Number of collective agreements concluded and registered during the year (including industrial and national agreements), 2002–2015 ...	179
Figure 9.3	Appeals to the public conciliator, 2000–2016	186
Figure 9.4	Minimum and average gross wage per month, 2008–2018 (euros).....	188
Figure 10.1	Strikes in Finland, 2000–2016	210

Figure 11.1	Union density by industry in 2013, France (%)	222
Figure 11.2	France: number of workplace agreements signed annually, 1983–2017	230

Volume II

Figure 12.1	Geographical breakdown of collective bargaining coverage, 1998–2017	250
Figure 12.2	Collective bargaining coverage as a percentage of workers employed by companies covered by collective agreements, 2017	251
Figure 12.3	Collective bargaining coverage in selected industries, 2017	252
Figure 12.4	Extended original agreements in force, 1991–2017	253
Figure 12.5	Development of collectively agreed wages in metal, retail and the total economy, 2000–2018	255
Figure 12.6	Development of strikes, 2000–2018	256
Figure 21.1	Bargaining coverage in the Netherlands, 1970–2016.....	450
Figure 21.2	Adult minimum wage, average contractual wages and actual wages and hourly labour productivity in the Netherlands, 1964–2016.....	454

Volume III

Figure 23.1	Coverage rates of collective agreements in force and those published annually, 2000–2016 (%)	488
Figure 23.2	Number of collective agreements and extension ordinances annually published, 2000–2017	489
Figure 23.3	Number of workers covered by type of collective agreement, 2002–2016	493
Figure 23.4	Number of updated collective agreements by type, 2005–2017	494
Figure 24.1	Company collective agreements (and additional acts), 2005–2014	512
Figure 27.1	Collective bargaining coverage in Spain, 2000–2016	568
Figure 27.2	Derogations from collective agreements (inaplicaciones), Spain, 2012–2017	569
Figure 28.1	Union density and organisational rate of employers' associations in Sweden, 2000–2017 (%).....	587
Figure 28.2	Share of workers covered by collective agreements in Sweden, 2005–2017 (%).....	589
Figure 28.3	Labour conflicts in Sweden, 2000–2018	596
Figure 28.4	Overall wage drift and in different sectors, 2000–2018	599
Figure 30.1	Development of collective bargaining coverage (2000 and 2015/2016)	641

List of tables

Volume I

Table 1.1	Level of bargaining, 1980–2014	11
Table 2.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in Austria	34
Table 2.2	Trade union density in metal and banking in Austria, 2000 and 2015 ...	39
Table 3.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in Belgium	54
Table 4.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in Bulgaria	78
Table 4.2	Membership development of KNSB and CL Podkrepa	79
Table 4.3	Issues for which some collective agreements provide wider scope of information and consultation	89
Table 5.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in Croatia	94
Table 5.2	Bargaining coverage by ownership sector, 2014.....	96
Table 5.3	Union density by sector, 2014	98
Table 6.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in Cyprus	110
Table 7.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in Czechia	132
Table 7.2	Bargaining coverage for ČMKOS-affiliated unions (% of employees)	136
Table 8.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in Denmark.....	151
Table 8.2	Trade union membership in Denmark ('000).....	154
Table 8.3	Confederations' share of total union membership (%)	154
Table 8.4	Collective bargaining coverage (%).....	157
Table 8.5	Industrial conflicts in Denmark, 1996–2016.....	163
Table 8.6	Achievements of collective bargaining in the retail sector	167
Table 9.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in Estonia.....	174
Table 9.2	Signatory parties of collective agreements in practice	183
Table 9.3	Share of active collective agreements regulating different issues (%) ...	189
Table 10.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in Finland	198
Table 10.2	Collective bargaining levels in Finland, 2000–2016.....	203
Table 10.3	Collective agreement coverage in Finland, 2000–2016.....	205

Table 11.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in France.....	217
Table 11.2	Number of industrial agreements in France covering more than 5,000 employees (2015)	224
Table 11.3	Union representativeness in France (%).....	226
Table 11.4	Breakdown of the topics of agreements in France (2015).....	234

Volume II

Table 12.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in Germany	239
Table 12.2	Trade union membership in Germany.....	243
Table 12.3	Relative importance of bargaining levels, 2000–2017.....	247
Table 12.4	Workers covered by a works council and a collective agreement in manufacturing and private services, 2017	258
Table 13.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in Greece.....	268
Table 13.2	Contestation as a multi-dimensional concept	270
Table 13.3	Number of strikes in Greece, selected years	275
Table 13.4	Collective agreements and arbitration decisions, 2010–2016	283
Table 14.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in Hungary.....	296
Table 14.2	Number and coverage of collective agreements in Hungary.....	302
Table 14.3	Single-employer collective agreements dealing with various issues in Hungary, all sectors, 2017	310
Table 15.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in Ireland	316
Table 15.2	The seven social partnership agreements.....	324
Table 16.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in Italy.....	339
Table 16.2	List of employers' associations in Italy	342
Table 16.3	Major trade union confederations in Italy (membership and density 2017)	343
Table 16.4	Major employer confederations in Italy (enterprises and association rate, 2009).....	344
Table 16.5	Extent of decentralised collective bargaining by size and industry, Italy, 2012–2013 (% of enterprises).....	346
Table 16.6	Trade union representation structures and employers' association rate by size and industry, Italy (% of enterprises).....	349
Table 16.7	Topics included in company agreements, Italy, 2012–2013	354
Table 17.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in Latvia.....	362
Table 18.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in Lithuania	381
Table 19.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in Luxembourg	404
Table 19.2	Collective agreements and annexes filed at the Mine and Labour Inspection (selected years).....	410

Table 19.3	Synoptic view of neo-corporatist instruments in Luxembourg.....	412
Table 20.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in Malta.....	424
Table 20.2	Union membership by confederation (2007 and 2015)	426
Table 20.3	Collective agreements in the private sector (2008).....	429
Table 21.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in the Netherlands....	445
Table 21.2	Collective agreements mentioning legal provisions, extension and restriction of legal provisions	458
Table 22.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in Poland.....	466
Table 22.2	Single-employer collective agreements (2004–2015)	470

Volume III

Table 23.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in Portugal	483
Table 24.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in Romania	506
Table 25.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in Slovakia	526
Table 25.2	Companies with a collective agreement by industry and size (2016)	530
Table 25.3	Number of industry-level collective agreements in Slovakia (selected years)	533
Table 26.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in Slovenia	545
Table 26.2	Share of workers covered by collective agreements, 2016	553
Table 27.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in Spain.....	564
Table 28.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in Sweden	583
Table 28.2	20 largest national unions in Sweden (31 December 2018).....	586
Table 28.3	Types of multi-level bargaining in the private sector	591
Table 28.4	Agreement models by category of workers and sector in 2018	593
Table 28.5	Industrial action in industrial bargaining, 2000–2018	597
Table 29.1	Principal characteristics of collective bargaining in the United Kingdom	606
Table 29.2	Coverage of collective bargaining (% of employees).....	611
Table 29.3	Scope of collective bargaining.....	614
Table 30.1	Bargaining regimes and degree/dynamics of (de)centralisation.....	630
Table 30.2	Use of extension mechanisms	643

Volume IV

Table A1 Indicators relevant to collective bargaining	669
Table A3 Extension mechanisms in Europe	691

List of contributors

Dragan Bagić is Associate Professor at the Department of Sociology, Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences, University of Zagreb. He is one of the rare scholars in Croatia dealing with industrial relations issues. In addition to industrial relations, his research interests include political sociology, sociology of migration and social research methodology.

Godfrey Baldacchino, PhD, is Pro-Rector and Professor of Sociology at the University of Malta, Malta, where he also chairs the Board of the Centre for Labour Studies.

Wike Been is a postdoctoral researcher at the Amsterdam Institute for Advanced Labour Studies (AIAS) of the University of Amsterdam (UvA). She obtained her PhD at Utrecht University at the Interuniversity Centre for Social Science Theory and Methodology (ICS). Her research focuses on labour relations, (the interaction between) national, sectoral and HR policy formulation and work–life policies

Inga Blaziene is a Senior Researcher and Deputy Director of the Lithuanian Social Research Centre in Vilnius. She holds a PhD in Economics from Gediminas Technical University, Vilnius. Inga was a visiting scholar at Corpus Christi College, Oxford University. Currently, she is a national correspondent for Lithuania in different EU networks, including the European Observatory of Working Life and the European Centre of Expertise in the field of labour law, employment and labour market policies. Inga's research focuses on employment and labour market policies, industrial relations and working conditions.

Szilvia Borbély, PhD, is an economist, senior research fellow and member of the board of the Trade Union Economic and Social Research Institute (SZGTI), and a former member of the Collective Bargaining Coordination Committee of the European Trade Union Confederation. Present research areas include: industrial relations (social dialogue, analysis of collective agreements, social partners' capacity building), labour market gender issues (gender wage gap, gender and collective bargaining) and lately migration. She has more than 150 publications, several of them in English. She used to run a small research company, MARMOL Bt.

Jan Czarzasty, PhD, is Reader at the Institute of Philosophy, Sociology and Economic Sociology of the Warsaw School of Economics (Szkoła Główna Handlowa w Warszawie, SGH). He is a work and employment relations expert and a regular collaborator with domestic (Institute of Public Affairs, ISP; 'Dialog' Centre for Social Partnership, CPS 'Dialog') and international (Eurofound, ETUI) research and policy institutions, as well as national-level social partners. He has published in, among others, the British Journal of Industrial Relations, the European Journal of Industrial Relations and Employee Relations.

Manwel Debono, PhD, is a Chartered Occupational Psychologist and a Senior Lecturer at the Centre for Labour Studies, University of Malta, Malta.

Roland Erne is Jean Monnet Chair of European Integration and Employment Relations at UCD's College of Business and PI of the ERC Project 'Labour Politics and the EU's new Economic Governance Regime' at the UCD Geary Institute for Public Policy.

Carlos J. Fernández Rodríguez is a Senior Lecturer in Sociology at the Universidad Autónoma de Madrid, Spain. His research interests are sociology of consumption and organisations, and industrial relations.

Vera Glassner is a researcher at the Department of Economics at the Chamber of Labour in Vienna. Her research focus is on labour relations from an international comparative and transnational perspective.

Ramune Guobaite-Kirsiene is currently a lecturer at the Department of Business Law, Law Faculty, Mykolas Romeris University, Vilnius. She holds a PhD in Law from Mykolas Romeris University. She was a visiting scholar at the State University of Milan (Università degli Studi di Milano, 'Statale') and a participant in the EFES training course 'Transforming social security education: from regular to blended courses', at the Institute of Social Law, KU Leuven, Belgium. Her research focus is employment and labour law and social security law.

Julia Hofmann works as a researcher at the Chamber of Labour and is a lecturer in sociology at the University of Vienna. Her research focus is social inequality, the sociology of work and labour relations.

Rafael Ibáñez Rojo is Senior Lecturer in Sociology at the Universidad Autónoma de Madrid, Spain. His research interests are sociology of work and consumption, and industrial relations.

Gregoris Ioannou is a sociologist and Research Fellow at the University of Glasgow. He is also an external expert for Eurofound on 'Working conditions and sustainable work'. His research focuses on labour relations and trade unionism, class conflicts and contentious politics and the South European crisis. Aspects of his work have been published as articles in international peer-reviewed journals, chapters in collective academic volumes, reports and commentaries.

Paul Jonker-Hoffrén is a Finnish Academy of Sciences postdoctoral researcher in the Work Research Centre of the University of Tampere (since 2017). The topic of his research project is 'Labour market participation through networks? Self-employed workers in Finland and the Netherlands'. Previously he has worked in the Department of Sociology and the Turku Centre for Labour Studies. His main research interests are labour market relations and their relations to economic policy, self-employment, and the sociology and philosophy of work.

Marta Kahancová is a senior researcher and managing director at the Central European Labour Studies Institute (CELSI) in Bratislava, Slovakia. Her research interests include labour markets, working conditions and industrial relations in central and eastern Europe. She has participated in many international research projects. Her current work focuses on social dialogue articulation in Europe, innovative trade union practices and public sector industrial relations in central and eastern Europe. Her work has appeared in the European Journal of Industrial Relations, the International Journal of HRM, the Comparative Labour Law & Policy Journal, Industrielle Beziehungen and Transfer. Prior to her current position, she held positions at the Central European University in Budapest, the Max Planck Institute for the Study of Societies in Cologne and the University of Amsterdam.

Epp Kallaste, PhD, is Senior Researcher at the Estonian Centre for Applied Research CentAR, where her main areas of expertise are labour relations, labour market, social protection and education.

Nerijus Kasiliauskas is a lecturer at the Faculty of Law of Vilnius University and partner and attorney-at-law at TRINITY in Vilnius. He obtained the qualification of Doctor of Social Science from Vilnius University, Faculty of Law. Nerijus specialises in labour and employment law, as well as dispute resolution. At TRINITY Nerijus practices mainly employment law; in addition to everyday legal advice, he also represents clients in court and in pre-trial proceedings. Nerijus Kasiliauskas is a Member of the Labour Relations Commission to the Tripartite Council of the Republic of Lithuania.

Ioannis Katsaroumpas is a lecturer in employment law at the University of Sussex. His most recent work examines the constitutional dimension of the impact of austerity measures on Greek collective labour law and the relationship between precariousness and fundamental rights in European Union law.

Maarten Keune is Co-Director of the Amsterdam Institute for Advanced Labour Studies (AIAS) and Professor of Social Security and Labour Relations at the University of Amsterdam (UvA). He obtained a PhD in political and social sciences at the European University Institute in Florence. He worked for seven years for the International Labour Organization in Latin America and Eastern Europe. Prior to his appointment in Amsterdam, Maarten worked as a senior researcher at the European Trade Union Institute in Brussels. He has also carried out assignments for the European Commission, the European Foundation for the Improvement of Living and Working Conditions, the European Economic and Social Committee and the United Nations. Maarten Keune conducts research in the field of labour relations, labour market and social security.

Vassil Kirov is Associate Professor at the Institute for the Study of Societies and Knowledge, Bulgarian Academy of Sciences (ISSK-BAS) and Associate Researcher at the European Trade Union Institute (ETUI). His research interests include the sociology of enterprise, work and organisations, employment relations, digitalisation, labour markets and Europeanisation. Vassil Kirov has been a researcher in large EU-funded research projects and has worked as an external expert for the European Commission, the International Labour Organisation, the European Foundation for Working and Living Conditions and CEDEFOP. Currently he is a Visiting Professor at Sciences Po, France and at LISER, Luxembourg. He has published several books and articles in international scientific journals. His recent publications include the co-edited books Hard work in new jobs. The quality of work and life in European growth sectors (with Ursula Holtgrewe and Monique Ramioul, 2015); Labour and social transformations in central and eastern Europe: Europeanization and beyond (with Violaine Delteil, 2016) and Policy implications of virtual work (with Pamela Meil, 2017).

Anders Kjellberg is Professor of Sociology at Lund University, Sweden. His research deals with industrial relations, labour markets and labour migration.

Aristea Koukiadaki is a senior lecturer in employment law at the University of Manchester. Her most recent work examines the impact of austerity measures on collective bargaining in Europe, the relationship between labour regulation and precarious work and the working conditions of male and female football players.

Maria da Paz Campos Lima has a PhD in Sociology from the Lisbon University Institute. She is a Senior Researcher in the area of Innovation and Labour at Instituto Universitário de Lisboa (ISCTE-IUL), DINÂMIA'CET – IUL, Lisboa, Portugal. She has been auxiliary professor at Lisbon University Institute, teaching on the European Masters in Labour Studies course, and she has been cooperating with the Department of Sociology of Copenhagen University and with the Employment Relations Research Centre (FAOS). She has been correspondent of EIRO (2006–2014) and of EurWORK since 2014. Her research interests include comparative industrial relations, collective bargaining and tripartite concertation and more recently also trade unionism and social movements. She has participated in recent European comparative projects with a focus on labour market reforms and social dialogue (DIADSE) and on temporary work and collective bargaining. At present she is the coordinator of a national project (REVAL) on labour market trends and also coordinator of the CESIS team in a European comparative project (NEWEFIN) on new forms of employment and social dialogue. She is a member of the editorial committee of Transfer, European Review of Labour and Research Quarterly of the ETUI.

Jens Lind is Professor Emeritus at the Department of Sociology and Social Work, Aalborg University, Denmark. His, main interests and research areas are in industrial relations, focussing on labour market policy, collective bargaining, trade unions and unemployment.

Aija Lulle holds a doctoral degree in Human Geography with a specialisation in migration. She is currently a post-doctoral researcher at the University of Eastern Finland, researching inequality among transnational families in Baltic and Nordic regions. Aija recently completed her postdoctoral research at the University of Sussex (UK) on European youth mobility. Her research interests are clustered around migration experiences and migrants' well-being over the life course. She was the founding director of the Centre for Diaspora and Migration Research at the University of Latvia. She acts as an expert on migration policies and practical application of EU migration policies in Latvia. Aija Lulle has published widely, and her contributions include books, edited books, peer reviewed journal papers, book chapters and contributions to encyclopaedias and handbooks on migration. Her most recent book, co-authored with King, is Ageing, gender, and labour migration (Palgrave 2016). As of September 2018, she is lecturer in human geography at Loughborough University (UK).

Vincenzo Maccarrone is a PhD student in Employment Relations at UCD's College of Business and the UCD Geary Institute for Public Policy. His research, funded by the Irish Research Council, contributes to an understanding of the effect of the new European economic governance on the Irish and Italian systems of industrial relations.

Miguel Martínez Lucio is a Professor at the University of Manchester and is involved in the Work & Equalities Institute. His research interests include industrial relations, the role of the state at work, and international human resource management.

Monika Martišková is a researcher at the Central European Labour Studies Institute (CELSI) in Bratislava, Slovakia and a PhD candidate at the department of Social Geography and Regional Development at Charles University in Prague. She is interested in labour market institutions and collective bargaining in central and eastern Europe. She has been involved in many research projects supported by the European Commission concentrating on social partner responses to increasing precariousness in the labour market in Czechia and Slovakia in the private and public sectors. Her most recent work also embraces the impact of digitalisation on working conditions. Her PhD research focuses on the position of labour in global production networks using the example of the automotive industry in central and eastern Europe.

Torsten Müller is Senior Researcher at the European Trade Union Institute in Brussels, where he is responsible for the area of wages and collective bargaining in Europe.

Martin Myant is Associate Researcher at the European Trade Union Institute. Formerly Professor at the University of the West of Scotland (UK), he has researched economic and political development in central and eastern Europe. His publications include The rise and fall of Czech capitalism: economic development in the Czech Republic since 1989 (Edward Elgar, 2003) and, with Jan Drahokoupil, Transition economies: political economy in Russia, eastern Europe and Central Asia (Wiley-Blackwell, 2011).

László Neumann, PhD, is a sociologist and senior research fellow, formerly at the Labour Research Institute and its successor institutions. His current research interest embraces several fields of industrial relations: decentralised collective bargaining, employee participation, labour relations in foreign-owned companies and social dialogue at various levels. He used to be an adviser to the trade union federation LIGA and now gives lectures in industrial relations at ELTE University, Budapest.

Valentina Paolucci is Assistant Professor of Human Resource Management and Employment Relations at the School of Business, University College Dublin. She obtained a PhD in Comparative Employment Relations from Warwick Business School (IRRU). She has held visiting fellowships at the Centre for Sociological Research (KU Leuven) and at the Employment Relations Research Centre (University of Copenhagen). Her paper ‘The role of collective bargaining in addressing flexibility and security’, published in the EJIR, received the ILERA 2016 Best Paper Prize. She acts as an ‘external expert’ for Eurofound.

Roberto Pedersini is Associate Professor of Economic Sociology at the University of Milan. His main research interests include labour market regulation and policies and industrial and employment relations. He has both participated in and coordinated several research projects in these fields since the early 1990s at both national and international level. He has collaborated with the International Labour Office, the European Commission and the European Foundation for the Improvement of Living and Working Conditions on several occasions. He was chief editor of the 2014 edition of the European Commission’s biennial Industrial Relations in Europe report.

Andreja Poje is a macroeconomist and executive secretary of the Association of Free Trade Unions of Slovenia (ZSSS), responsible for economic policy and sustainable development, wage policy, collective bargaining, tax policy, social contributions and equal opportunities. She holds a Master’s degree and is a PhD candidate at the University of Ljubljana. Her work and research are centred on public finance, labour economics, collective bargaining, wages, minimum wages, wage and income inequalities and work–life balance. She publishes articles in these areas independently or as a co-author.

Aidan Regan is Assistant Professor of Politics and International Relations at University College Dublin (UCD), and Director of the Dublin European Institute (DEI). Prior to UCD he was a postdoctoral fellow at the Max Planck Institute for the Study of Societies in Germany (MPIfG), and a Max Weber fellow at the European University Institute (EUI) in Italy. Aidan completed his PhD in Public Policy at UCD while working at the Amsterdam Institute for Advanced Labour Studies (AIAS), University of Amsterdam. His research focus is the comparative political economy of European integration, housing, industrial relations and the welfare state. His work has appeared in Perspectives on Politics, Politics and Society, New Political Economy, the Journal for Common Market Studies, the European Journal of Industrial Relations, Comparative European Politics, the Socio-Economic Review and Intereconomics, among others. You can follow him on Twitter at @aidan_regan.

Thorsten Schulten is Head of the Collective Agreements Archive of the Institute of Economic and Social Research (WSI) within the Hans Böckler Stiftung in Düsseldorf. He also teaches political science as an Honorary Professor at the University of Tübingen.

Mária Sedláková is a researcher at the Central European Labour Studies Institute (CELSI) in Bratislava. Her research interests include industrial relations with a focus on collective bargaining and social dialogue, non-standard/new forms of employment and labour market policies and institutions in central and eastern Europe. Mária has participated in numerous EU-funded research projects and studies conducted for the European Parliament and Eurofound. Currently, she is involved in research on the platform economy in Slovakia.

Sertac Sonan is Associate Professor of International Relations and Director of the Centre for Cyprus and Mediterranean Studies at Cyprus International University. He contributes to the monthly FES Cyprus newsletter and serves on the editorial board of the Cyprus Review. His research interests include political clientelism, corruption, the Cyprus conflict and Turkish Cypriot politics and economy.

Miroslav Stanojević is Professor of Industrial Relations at the Faculty of Social Sciences, University of Ljubljana, Slovenia. He deals with comparative industrial relations. The transformation of industrial relations in Slovenia within the context of European integration has been the focus of his research interests. He is involved in networks dealing with trade union and employment relations research in EU and central and eastern European countries.

Patrick Thill is a political and social scientist at the Labour Market Department of the Luxembourg Institute of Socio-Economic Research (LISER). He holds an MA in International Relations from the University of Warwick and studied politics and literature at Queen Mary University, University of London and at the University of Valencia in Spain. He is the national expert for Luxembourg in the European Centre of Expertise in the field of labour law, employment and labour market policies (ECE) of the European Commission and the national expert in the Worker Participation Europe Network of the European Confederation of Trade Unions. He has conducted studies, consultancies and peer reviews for the European Commission, the OECD and CEDEFOP, as well as for several government agencies in Luxembourg. He is a board member of the Cellule de Recherche de l'Évaluation sur les Conflits (CRRC) at the Ministry of Research and an expert in the Comité de Conjoncture of the Ministry of the Economy. His current research focus is the Europeanisation of employment policies, youth unemployment and employment relations systems in Europe.

Adrien Thomas is a researcher at the Luxembourg Institute of Socio-Economic Research. He has published on industrial relations and political sociology. His publications include Les frontières de la solidarité. Les syndicats et les immigrés au cœur de l'Europe (2015).

Aurora Trif is Assistant Professor in International Employment Relations & HRM at Dublin City University Business School. She holds a PhD in Industrial Relations from London South Bank University. She was a Postdoctoral Researcher at the Max Planck Institute for the Study of Societies in Cologne. Her research interests include comparative employment relations, precarious work, collective bargaining and trade unions in Eastern Europe. Aurora was the Principal Investigator for the EU-funded PRECARIR project focused on the strategies of social partners in addressing precarious work in nine central and eastern European countries and Greece (2014–2016). She has published in leading academic journals such as the British Journal of Industrial Relations and the European Journal of Industrial Relations.

Elza Ungure holds a BA and MA in cultural and social anthropology from the University of Latvia. Elza has done research on various subjects relating to practices in different spheres of exchange, labour relations, political representation, and migration and transnationalism. She has also participated in applied social research projects on urban planning with a focus on social aspects of various infrastructures, as well as place-making practices in Riga, Latvia, and also on the education system, with a focus on higher education in design in the Baltic states, as well as on education for persons with disabilities at all levels of the education system. Her current research interests include the Bourdieusian theoretical framework encompassing habitus, capital and field; human geography; social and collective memory; sensory anthropology; and spatio-temporal analysis.

Kurt Vandaele is Senior Researcher at the European Trade Union Institute in Brussels. His research interests include trade union revitalisation, workers' collective action repertoire and the political economy of Belgium and the Netherlands.

Catherine Vincent is Senior Researcher at IRES (Noisy-le-Grand, France). She is a sociologist specialising in industrial relations. Her current research interests focus on collective bargaining, employee workplace representation and human relations management in the public sector. She has been involved in a broad range of European research projects and co-authored Wage bargaining under the new European economic governance (ETUI 2015) and Multi-employer bargaining under pressure. Decentralisation trends in five European countries (ETUI 2018).

Jeremy Waddington is Project Coordinator at the European Trade Union Institute and Emeritus Professor of Industrial Relations, University of Manchester. He has written extensively on trade union organisation and activity, employee participation and trade union renewal.